ODESSA THROWS ITS DOORS OPEN TO WELCOME ALL CERTIFIED MIGRANTS

REWILDING MOVEMENT Reconstructing our Local Ecosystems

With man-made climate change accelerating many habitats around the world are no longer suited to sustain the wildlife that once thrived there. But human settlement is providing serious barriers to migrations that would once have taken place naturally over the aeons.

A group of pro-active scientists who style themselves 'Ark-o-logists' have been inspired by the idea of rewilding large areas of the planet. These 'Arkos' have published radical proposals to rewild large areas of lands that have been left untended for years.

Odessa, scientists studying the Great Lakes basin are keen to restore habitat for the graceful aerobicic yeti. (pictured) "Arkos like to take a biblical overview, if you will, regarding ourselves as something like modern Noahs and building eco-Arks to transport wildlife from areas where it is endangered to those areas where it once flourished." The movement to 're-wolf' large tracts of fallow land making them once again suited to sustain packs of ravaging lupis ferrox, is only one of many initiatives. The wolves can be brought to bear on the introduction of unsuitable and inscrutable oriental species like the Asian Projectile Carp. Wolf faeces contain vital ingredients to sustain the beautiful, if somewhat poisonous butterfly, the haemotosis mortalis which was once prevalent throughout this area but has now been reduced in territory to a small area around Lake Yurt. Many locals applaud the removal of all those unsightly solar panels and windmills, sustainable bric-a-brac, that goes hand in hand with the Rewilding Initiative. "Just send it all back to China" is a common plea. However

Migration – No Longer Just for the Birds

In days past it was thought to be 'just for the birds' but now everyone is doing it. Migration! Cities like London are now composed of 37% born outside of the UK. Lesser metropolises, like Odessa, carry these demographics to an extreme registering over 99.5% of the urban population falling in this category. Statistics in places further flung are scant but towns like Abergavenny claim to be almost 93% 'Welsh or other'.

And it's not just people who are migrating. In today's globalised world major corporations have moved to the sun and fun of places like the Cayman

Willow Wallop farm is hosting numerous migrants over the Christmas Period. They hale from as far afield as Abergavenny Islands which is on track to eclipse London and NYC as the world's financial capital.

Bankers and Titans of Industry everywhere are beginning to realise that there is more to life than sitting around in architectured offices worrying about taxes. Some mega-corps migrate to solitary depopulated rocks from which they can ponder the foibles of the world. Google has traipsed off to the Bermuda Triangle, while Amazon prefers the sophistication of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg. Others seek out the lure of the mysterious Middle East where you can spend a day on the ski slopes, then take in an

Louvre while on the way to a tropical evening at the Moulin-Rouge Sur Plage to enjoy the ever popular Ludwig van Beatles show. In such migratory Valhallas the blissful can steep themselves in a rich history which stretches back almost 50 years knowing that civilisation began amidst the piles of rubble that lie beyond the Pale. Indeed it has been a tale of migration ever since, a story which is all about seeking out a better life. In today's globalised community everyone wants to Go Green in pastures as far away as possible.

Recent debate in the UK parliament has okayed a boost in migration from Iraq and Syria through an enhanced bombing campaign. International arms manufacturers ensure that the most up-to-date weaponry is air-lifted into areas designated for regime change.

Even the climate itself is migrating. Cities like London are enjoying a warmer Christmas shopping spree while people up north have seen their towns transformed into veritable picture postcard Venices.

A story of migration has always added to personal caché; it is indisputably a status booster to proclaim that you hale from somewhere else. It wasn't long ago that the voyage across the river that divides London was seen as a venture into the unknown, but now both sides of the river are flooded with the migrating unknowables.

Americans like to boast that they are a nation of immigrants. Some Republican hopefuls can even trace their roots back to the folks that constructed the pyramids as grain elevators on behalf of Joseph who was himself a migrant with lots of Yankee know-how.

That's the real crux of it. Migrants bring new energy and fresh ideas about society and how it should be transformed. After 50 years of peace, aging Europeans are ready to welcome fresh blood everywhere and take aboard the latest advances in jurisprudence.

Shariah law and public stoning will transform ossified bureaucracies.

Migrants bring their own distinctive cultural flare to add to the broth of modern societies. Whether you are a Bulgarian Babushka in a quaint Santa hat merrily jingling in front of an Oxford Street department store, a PhD in Security Services from some east African megaversity, a sultry be-burged houri laden with shopping bags or a Chinese Plutocrat scouting out additions to your property empire, you are adding vitality to modern city life. Migrancy has become so popular that some choose to claim the privileges without actually having to bother with relocation. Many Brits bask in their 'non-dom' status which allows them to reside in other jurisdictions without actually having to leave home. These coveted non-dom favours are hereditary so your offspring can acquire that migrant caché and keep up to trend with the latest political antics of their homeland via YouTube.

A pilot exchange scheme has been set up to 'blend the ecologies of Abergavenny, a gateway to the Brecon Beacons and Odessa's fallow farmlands. The bald hills of the Brecon Beacons once sustained a dense forest replete with wild life. Mastodons and Mammoths grazed the plains. A landscape that currently supports a few dazed sheep was once a complex ecosystem supporting the lynx ferrox, aurochs and a host of other magnificent predators. Likewise around Quadrilla and the fracking industry are set to thrive throughout the rewilded zones 'wreaking minimal damage to the topside aesthetic'. Re-wilding expert and Arko enthusiast Horace Paleodot explains that there is absolutely no danger to human life.

"With the aid of modern genetics we can breed species that will pose less of a threat to human life. Besides most people have moved to the cities nowadays anyways."

Super Mum

by Edwilliam Edwordsmith

Some kids lo misfortune do succumb
And cannol boast a SuperMum
Who cooks and jams and pols and sews
Rebuilds your home so far it goes

Who adds some new wings to your school
And makes her bossiness seem cool.
She'll paint your room up in a jiffy
In colours bold and somewhat iffy.

At times she may seem off her rocker
But then she'll help with overlocker.
She sets the benchmark oh so high
Should youth aspire to be so spry.

So we our glasses now will raise
With hearty paean in her praise.
What if some others raise their eyes
When each day holds a new surprise.

Musee du LURVE - Franchise Francaise

One of the world's great museums, the Louvre de Paris has opted for a profitable expansion into the franchise markets with signature LURVE buildings opening up around the world. The new LURVE which has opened in the Gulf Kingdoms have upped the international race to grab culture while its still available. The United Arab Emirates intend to lay claim to the centre of world culture. With and annual acquisitions budget that is 30 times the combined resources of the Metropolitan Museum and MOMA in New York, the New Louvre and Guggenheim Galleries in Abu Dhabi designed by starchitects Jean Nouvel and Zahadid are set to snag the best collections coming available worldwide. International 'Culturati' appreciate the convenience of being able to jet in, grab some fine dining and then take a quick google at the world's greatest collection of masterpieces before repairing to the beach or perhaps hit the indoor Alpine piste.

Great art is all about a mythology which establishes if anything is good or not. The Gulf states have the resources to create the mythology that they need to eclipse 'Old Europe' as well as the pesky 'Oriental Tiger'. People don't want random airy fairy aesthetics. They want facts that add up to a consistent arty story."

The World's First Computer Generated Musical

As we write the World's first computer generated musical is being assembled by a cybernetic mastermind to provide an instant blockbuster. The unalloyed genius of Android Lloyd WebBot is pitching a show that will rival the spectacular successes of Cats, Evita and Phantom combined. It will bring the action up-to-date, tuning into current obsession with social media, carefully crafting a plot that will synchronise with trending issues by averaging aggregate hits on key social sites.

The story will trend as a rip roaring tale about a playful transgendered Argentinian kitten named Kitelvis who has been disfigured in an animal testing lab by malevolent genetic scientists. She-he falls in love with a cute resourceful waif from a minority community, street wise but an absolute zero. Ultimately she-he belts out a show stopping paean in the hit-to-be song

which is perfect pitched to bring down the house.

A team of entertainment academics has spent months programming an instant success that will push all the right buttons. A Spokes-Bot for the Cast in stone

Android Lloyd Webbot team explains the E-mpressario's visionary strategy, "Absolutely nothing will be left to chance. The story pulls together so many current obsessions that the plot is clearly a no brainer.

We've mirrored the metrics for all the major Broadway and West-End shows including launch dates, lengths of run before transfer, star material. We are currently looking to score 250 Jennifer Laurence look-alikes for the star roles as the multi-dimensional Kitelvis.

I don't want to give too much away but we want to nail the current trending for cute kitten antics and collage this with nuclear Armageddon and beheadings. We intend to ring enough bells that no one will remain unmoved. Words fail! You'll have to experience it to believe it.

This is the story for our age."

Campaign for Obligatory Imposition of Niqab

CCCOIN Spokesperson Sivam Ziemac Licec makes a strong case for a cover up

With the aging of the baby boom generation and the current vogue for septuagenarians to opt for full body tattoo enhancement there has been a rising backlash against anti-niqab sentiments.

Recently elections in Canada were swung over this critical issue piloting the new Liberal government into power. The Burka has been proven a powerful political weapon and one that CCCOIN, the Concerned Citizens Campaign for Obligatory Imposition of Niqab are recommending be applied to some of the Republican presidential hopefuls.

But Young Turks and the media savvy have long demanded that an older generation cover up some of its excesses. Local Twiterror Bob Bornagin tweets, "It's really a question of too much information. It's all very well to parade your travesties on Instagram but no one wants to encounter this kind of thing in real life. It scares the bejezus outta my kids when we meet one of those tattooed TrannyGrannies in our local mall. You see those wrinklies zooming around on their auto-zimmers and like you wanna shriek out Like Just Cover Up!"

CCCOIN is campaigning for the Obligatory Imposition of the Niqab in all public spaces, including courtrooms and official swearing-in ceremonies for those over 40.

Odessa's Mayor Samoht Eilriaf concurs, "Personally I would opt for one of those full body enhancement suits with hologram facial installation, you know – the ones with the Velcro tabs and the built-in inconvenience pads".

Layla Lamorable who at 87 is contemplating her lifetime as a human palimpsest is more forthright. "Not that I necessarily want to look like Joanna Lumley when I get to that age, but I think that 'compassion statement' is so much more rewarding interpersonally than the 'in-yer-face old git look' that many now affect".

Advocates note that there is much to be said for a burka, enhanced with niqab. "Identity becomes a non-issue". Obesity? Amputations? Heck no problem! Ya just don't hafta know."

Some have noted a rising tide of shoplifting as those with criminal intent turn to full body cover up. But most upmarket shops increasingly monitor their patrons with continuous full body strip scanning similar to that conducted in airports all manned by skilled adolescent interns who know exactly what to look for.

"Those days of being able to walk out with a refrigerator under your chador are long gone. Trained staff can pick these off every time as they trundle to the exit."

Or some opt for Burka Lite!

CCCOIN Proposed Campaign Burqa for Donald J Trump

Donald Trump has declared Britain a No-Go nest of Massive Muslims. Even the Queen has been forced to adopt Hijab.

Cashing-in on our Cons

PrisonPropPorn - Around the world local governments are waking up to the fact that prison properties are located on prime inner-city development lands. Astute development can defray the costs of relocation of prison clientele to more economic venues. “Even though Victorian space standards were minimal, it makes little sense in an economy based on flipping real estate to have our convicted malefactors occupying prime real estate at the hearts of our cities. The fact that many of these buildings are listed as heritage properties justifies a sensitive pro-conservation approach and allows us to adapt space standards and amenities while still charging mega-bucks. “We are targeting ambitious young professionals who are desperate to get a foothold on the property ladder. In Kingston Frontenac, we have moves afoot to rehouse the prison community in recently vacated communities around Fort Harper (previously Fort McMurray) where a large stock of low cost accommodation has become available.

Cyborg Implants Will Transform Your Life

CYBORG IMPLANTS are now regarded as the ultimate security provision. Bar-coded implants under the skin can be read by any scanner and identify your authority to undertake particular requests giving access to buildings, private apartments, bank accounts or the marital or financial status of your daily encounters. Barcode settings can be personalised to send messages about your personal life to those you might encounter in a crowd situation. More sophisticated than Cinder or Grunger these markers can activate apps that provided scripted entry lines especially modulated to elicit a positive response from a correspondent. You just programme your mode at the beginning of the day and sit back to watch your life unfold.

Stratford Associations

Like that other great scion of Stratford, William Shakespeare, Justin Bieber enjoys fine drama. Just such a drama unravelled last night when someone on the Leafs side scored a conclusive goal which has advanced them to the bottom of the league while the League to Outlaw the Extinction of the Sea Otter has taken their case before the European Parliament where President Tsipras of Greece was trumped by his finance minister Antafagusto Pappandopoandreou in his austerity programme as Donald Trump admitted that his new Presidential golf course in Scotland was a bomb, and bombs rained down on advancing rebels in Northern Syria which discouraged the kinds of political advances that AunSang Su Chi has hoped to achieve in Burma as she visited Reyjavik to bring Burmese trade opportunities while taking in an opportunity to view the northern lights which the Americans have denounced as a Putin gimmick to bring tourism to the newly claimed but fast disappearing Russian territories at the north pole. Meanwhile a major plot was uncovered in Belgium where an ISIS terror cell planned to infiltrate the European Parliament in Yeti costumes and pass Sharia law across the European Union, while the Union flag was reasserted by protesters in the State capital in South Carolina who have repainted the capital building in its colours and capital building New York hedge fund Invitra has just announced that it is pulling out of America due to discussions about a Financial Services micro tax imposed on capital flight, while capital flights from Ouagadougou have been cancelled following the dramatic capture of the town by fundamentalists. Which gets us back to the fundamental drama of Shakespeare and his fellow Stratfordian, Justin Bieber.

Spearheading the Campaign for a Gluten Free World

Major world cultural institutions have joined the campaign to correct important art works that are sending the wrong sorts of messages to the viewing public

As world dietetic specialists have begun to wise up to the havoc wreaked by our gluten burdened diets the Campaign for Improvement of the Less Fortunate (CILF) has turned its sights on major cultural institutions around the world which are seen to be promoting addiction to noxious glutens. Spokesperson Teensa Wean explains, “Our visual world is polluted with all the wrong kinds of messages. As a species we evolved to eat a specific kind of diet. It is essentially paleolithic, but this is not the world view that is represented in our great repositories of culture. If you dropped a caveperson into a modern food court he/she wouldn’t know where to start, he/she would make him/herself mortally ill in no time.”

CILF has been waging war against all this contrary imagery and has produced a list of masterworks which they deem to be offensive. Roving Paint Bombers have been enlisted to expunge toxic glutens from artworks exposed in major galleries around the world. Teensa explains, “Glutens can be conclusively proven to sap your strength. Try this simple scientific test. Wrap a slice of mother’s pride bread saturated in chicken broth around your palm and try shaking hands with random strangers. In nine cases out of ten they will recoil involuntarily. Observe how they go weak at the knees. It’s amazing the reactions you’ll get.” CILF promoters assert that Vegans are proven to live up to 2% longer than those addicted to carbs and glutens. But these poisons have such widespread exposure that they seem to be the norm. The art of yesteryear is sending out all the wrong images.

Some of our best loved art needs a radical rethink Tattoodians Condemn Rampant Discrimination !

Gideon ZYxx’fd has brought a case before the Crown Courts based on Canada’s Charter of Human Rights following an incident in a Kingston bus in which a woman approached and hurled racial abuse. Speaking through an interpreter he explained, “She just assaulted me with her hostile stare, and nobody on the bus said boo in my defence.” ZYxx’fd has filed a complaint about the inherent racism of Canadian society and rampant discrimination that he encounters in daily life. His interpreter explains, “He can’t go nowhere without Snigs, (what Tattoodis call unbelievers) making racist comments based on his appearance. He can’t even get on a bus without people staring at him with hostility.” Gideon is a member of the Tattoodi Tribe from the island of A’Hem in the South Pacific. Tattoooing is a local art form which is carried out in praise of the god VIGG, giver of Nac skins. Tattoodians are required to become human palimpsests in praise of VIGG. The motifs are all grounded in the rich imagery of their religion, though the meanings of these symbols has been lost in the mists of time. Lapsed Tattoodians who forsake these customs are denounced as apostate, parboiled and skinned alive to incentivise others to follow scriptural blandishments. “Tattoodis have an ancient culture dating back to the creation of A’Hem, about 4 billion years ago according to modern scientific reckoning. So they regard themselves as a source religion. They too are people of the book. In their case it is an ancient revelation, a rich palimpsest composed of the skins of the people of Nac who once lived on a nearby island. This miraculous book describing the brave deeds of Tattoodi ancestors eventually saw its completion when the people on Nac emigrated.” “Despite all the lip-service paid there is disgusting racism at all levels of Western Society. Nobody stands up for little guys who are only following their religious convictions within a venerable cultural heritage,” explains ZYxx’fd’s interpreter.

Clock Boy Spearheads A Renaissance in School Science

So you thought that old tick-tock was a quaint antiquity a relic of a bygone age? Think again! Homeowners, who can barely remember those pre-LCD aeons, are suddenly scurrying up to their attics to retrieve long discarded treasures which can be turned into instant gold on eBay. The burgeoning world market can’t source enough of these quaint mechanisms following a massive lawsuit in which a Texas young-un was awarded $ 15 million in damages and mental distress after police swooped on his school science project. The security operation also involved the permanent evacuation of Fort Worth. Without following prescribed procedures, the security forces detained the thirteen year old inventor and questioned him in the absence of parents. The young-un, who cannot be named, had the brilliant idea of removing the clock works from an old Westclox alarm clock and placing it in a plain cardboard box stuffed with nails and dangling wires. He explained that his project, which he calls ‘Mr Wakey Wakey’ was intended to accelerate biogenic mutation in organic matter. “I wanted to post a few of these as a wake-up call for this kind of science in which our schools are falling so far behind other parts of the world.” Following his astonishing success in attracting media attention leading to a personal invitation to the White House by President Obama, there has been a rash of copy-cat entrepreneurship. The President eulogised such innovation as making him ‘proud to live in the land of Can-Do inventors’. International universities are falling over themselves to offer entrance scholarships to the young-un who can’t be named. He has already turned down offers from the Ivy Leagues, the prestigious Ecole Polytechnique de Paris and the RA (Raqqa Academy.) Others hoping to set their careers on a similar trajectory are combing the net for antique mechanisms to ingeniously adapt. Across the country school science projects are at last flourishing!

Top Dogs

Local Puppy Farmers should take note. Canine tastes are changing and there is BIG money to be made by ditching your Bichon Frises and consigning those Pompidous to the puppy mill. Following the heroic exploits of heroic police dogs like Gusto, who willingly gave his life to be first in to decommission a Carpathian terrorist bombers nest, hearts have gone out to this redoubtable Malinois breed. Exemplar among Man's Best Friends, the Malinois are regarded as among the world's most loyal creatures, ready to sacrifice their lives to their masters whims instantly and without complaint. Should our fellow humans manifest such a generosity of spirit! But due to their extraordinary qualities, bottlenecks have cropped up in the puppy supply chain. The military need a constant supply as 'man's best friends' are continually being blown to smithereens. Heroic Malinois, equipped with their cute infrared 'doggles', camcorders and suicide vests are to be found on every battlefield.

They have won the hearts of millions as they infiltrated terrorist hangouts to terrorise their prey. Breeders around the world have been booked for all existing stock well into the coming year and many have had to resort to surrogate parenthood to fulfil the burgeoning world-wide demand. With eyes located near the top of the head the Malinois boasts 360 degree and 100/20 vision acute to nuance at great distances. Razor sharp bicuspid, bred to achieve a 210 lbs per sq inch cinch, can far outperform other pooches. Yet owners confirm that once you get them trained you are putty in their hands.

Trained Malinois are always keen to please!

With the Baby Boomers rushing to downsize and cash in their equity on residential holdings at levels that Millennials find unaffordable, hedge funds are swooping in to snap up bargains as rental properties. The Sage of Omega, Warnin Buffant, has entered the market to snap up 200,000 unaffordable homes and convert them into a prime portfolio of vacant properties."It's a no brainer, our whole economy is based on flipping real estate. No government is going to tolerate a reduction in home values. It would be political suicide. Fortunately foreign investors will always stump up. So I'm onto a real winner here."

The T TIP of the Iceberg

Some of Canada's most lucrative industries are now relocating to our new TTIP trading partners in Imoro where they can take advantage of a progressive pro-business environment.

With no surviving population Imoro presents an ideal welfare-lite state, a veritable tabula rasa for resource supply line activation. It has neatly sidestepped the social polarisation of places like Bermuda and the Caymans where governments seek to tap into the vast resources flooding through their economies on behalf of their greedy locals. In the current climate of secretly negotiated international trade deals our new trade partners have also been handed carte blanche to sue partnering governments for government policies that result in loss of profits to their own economies. They can now insist that restrictive legislation imposing punitive controls on their products be removed to level the playing field. Imoro's President,

Dr Tadathoori Deselvandola, enthuses that Imoro has thrown open its doors to welcome companies that have been reined back by restrictive legislation abroad. "For Imorians fracking is a way of life. Frackophilic companies here can sue the pants off governments who attempt to rein in our companies investments abroad with crazy environmental controls. Some of the world's most enterprising tobacco magnates, now based in Imoro have been able to overturn restrictive packaging legislation imposed by their trading partners to allow a return to tobacco packaging with jollier connotations." Dr Tad's vision for Imoro extends to taking on the full panoply of financial services offered by other free-spirited banking havens like London, Delaware and the Cayman Islands."TTIP is a blessing for Imorians. New business is flooding in. We are positioning ourselves to become the world's banking hub by 2020".

Eco-Bridges to Nowhere

London's Lumley Bridge will provide a Green focal point as London adjusts to climate change realities

Now recognised as the world's Primate City, London is launching the latest in urban must-haves. The Garden Bridge to Nowhere is now on everyone's radar. Much of the attraction of the concept lies in the financing of these initiatives. Not a penny comes from the public coffers, these public spaces being funded by the fabulously rich and famous who want to give something back to society. Of course, being private philanthropy, the donors can call the shots on how their beneficence should be enjoyed. Lady Lumley, the brain behind the Help Britain Build Garden Bridges movement, (Hee-Bee-Bee-Gee-Bee), explains "Because these tend to be bridges to nowhere many of the punters may be wandering about aimlessly expecting to run into me. Therefore we have published guidelines for full enjoyment and our security staff will amplify the quality of the garden experience. All anti-social activities like playing bagpipes, practicing yoga, committal of ashes or political rallies of two or more Corbynites will be suppressed. We feel that we have evolved a winning formula and we want to spin it out worldwide. Every town I can think of should be clamouring for its own Bridge to Nowhere!" Abergavenny's Town Council recently approved a bridge over some of the Usk explains Councillor Nosila K'cam. Odessa's mayor however sees it from a different angle. "Actually I think that here we are just waiting for a Bridge from Somewhere".

Yes Please! QE 2

As the Uber Rich become an increasingly rarefied minority businesses like QuintEssentially catering to sophisticated tastes, have taken off as the nouveau pauvres scramble to get a tiny piece of the dribble down action.

QE has been a key banking policy since the crisis of 2008 and is intended to fly bravely in the face of miserable austerity fanatics like those who have recently commandeered the UK government. QuintEssentially made its reputation initially by flying Madonna's teabags across the Atlantic on a Lear Jet proving conclusively that there is no service too small when the money is too big.

The company has now begun to franchise its concept of unalloyed lackeydom and is offering QE 2 concessions to the North American market where the 1% is becoming ever more demanding. Wannabe toadies have camped out for days at Odessa's FUNBO to be among the first in line to bid for their very own QE2 concession.

Odessa School Board Imposes Strict Guidelines: Public Surveillance of Competitive Sports Parents

Public Surveillance has taken another leap forward with the installation of c.c.t.v. cameras to monitor 24/7 all aspects of a student's life. Parents can subscribe to www.schooliflive.com sites which transmit images of their offspring and records their behaviour. School security trustees extol such programmes. "Anti-social behavior like queue jumping, illicit kissing, or thumping of mates can be targeted and eradicated quickly. With over 700 cameras in a typical schoolyard even minor infringements of human rights can be eradicated by groups of roving Social Workers. But the policy can also be applied to over zealous parents who are only too often carried away in directing the performance of their offspring during sporting competitions. Less zealous parents tune into the performance of the younsters from the tranquility of the home and transmit their instructions directly by direct ear bud channelling. SecurisCool spokesperson Bev Brawn extols the success. "We find that if pounce on infringements with a zero tolerance policy, the larger issues just seem to evaporate."

Demonstrating that you're a people person and real team player

Talk about compassion fatigue!

So this year as a radical departure I've made a little compilation of ten seasonal enhancers that should improve the lives of my reading public and pick up your Holiday festivities setting you and your families apart from the flock.

Tip 1 - try using Santa Tree Needle Drop spray on your pets to stop them from shedding hairs on the carpet. (Works with the kids as well.)

Tip 2 - a poisoned pigeon wrapped in tin foil can make a memorable dove of peace for your Christmas Tree.

Tip 3 - Spray-glue dessicated coconut flakes to all your windows to give the impression of a Dickensian winter scene. Come January you can scrape this off and roll it into delicious sticky coco-balls for the kids school lunches.

Tip 4 - For a further heartwarming neo-Dickensian touch install papier mache migrant paupers out in the snow wistfully looking into your the windows and singing carols.

Tip 5 - cut your eggnog with magnolia emulsion. If you use Capt'n Fledermaus dry rum noe onne wull eever knew de dufference.

Tip 6 - give in to that overwhelming temptation NOT to see Star Wars.

Tip 7 - try out the family on the 'wonky veg' promotions at all the major supermarkets, emphasizing your mission to cut back on food waste. Those football sized brussel sprouts can be steeped overnight in maple syrup before you throw them away.

Tip 8 - Design your own Turin Shroud table display. Just get the whole family sitting around a white table cloth and equip them with a Jackson Pollock array of food dyes and condiments.

Tip 9 - lock the family into separate rooms and spend the entire holiday Tweeting one another from afar.

Tip 10 - postpone christmas entirely until about this time next year.

That's all for now - and probably quite enough! All I can say is keep those letters rolling in.

Wherever you are I wish you a Merry Christmas and I will attempt to be somewhere else.

Brecon Burqettes Team - (well at least its better than frog onesies)

The Brecon Burqettes are scheduled to lay the Odessa Trumpsters in a Christmas friendly in the Shell-Lube Parking Lot.

Both teams, are adopting the 'Put Up and Cover Up' game winning (and profitable) strategy enunciated by FIFA Chairman Sepp Blatter. They are looking forward to meeting the pay offs at the World Cup in Qatar in 2022. With temperatures expected to exceed 45 degrees C the game is already being promoted as a sizzler. While some have questioned the apparel stipulated by this conservative Gulf society, many footsie fans have welcomed a relief from the endless parades of tattoos, bared torsos and eyepaint that have transfixed the sport in recent years. Others have noted a new frisson of suspense as the ball disappears for long periods in the melee and players pursue various strategic entanglements. These parallels with Playstation challenges are thought to appeal to the younger generation that FIFA is so keen to draw back to the sport. Mr Blatter explains "I am planning to spearhead a whole new chapter for the world's favorite sport.

Some question the Trumpsters kit as leaving little to the imagination.

Zero Tolerance Robotic Policing

Robotic Security Enhancement has begun to revolutionise police roles around the world. Ontario Provincial Police are pursuing the latest progressive policing strategies following incidents in cities like Toronto where stressed out operatives have terminated citizens without following the appropriate procedures.

Technology is providing the solution to these grey areas by removing all moral ambiguities involved in effectively concluding any incident. The ZiT, (ZiT stands for Zero Inquest Tolerance) is linked into a comprehensive information web. Within microseconds a ZIT can access all personal transaction and data records, shopping and consumer profiles, medical and genetic records as well as web viewing habits to assess whether augmented risk levels warrant immediate intervention and neutralisation of a suspect. ZiT's can be programmed to be race and colour blind and they can also take a view on post code details. They can be enhanced to get tough on white collar crime. Petty malfeasance like jumping queues, clandestine littering, abetting pet delinquency, a panoply of antisocial activities will now experience the even hand of justice.

ZIT's have unparalleled ability to zero in on malefactors in a large crowd, picking out fanatics with ease to take affirmative action and neutralise risks. The ZiT exercises visual detection capacities which far exceed human faculties. They can read clothing labels at 2000 metres, make DNA assessments and employ the latest infrared thermal cam profiling to assess criminal risk potential from details that would elude all but the most perspicacious of police operatives. And more! The ZiT can assemble an instant phrenological assessment which will stand up in any court.

Sophisticated ZiT technology can even be programmed to keep our citizens safe by intervening presciently before a crime is committed, basing risk assessments on detailed thermal electrochemical analysis of brain hot spots to determine the likelihood of emergent anti-social intentions.

Your Horrorscope

Sponsored this week by the First Unmitigated Nigerian Bank of Odessa - FUNBOO

Capricorn 21 December-18 January, 18 Although there may be some basic truth in the old saying 'what you don't know can't hurt you', you are probably overdoing the blank stare, open-mouthed routine. A subscription to Marie-Claire will help you to tune into the really big issues. You deserve to go viral! (this is more than I can say for most of the dregs you associate with.!)

Aquarius 19 January - 17 February Consider learning the gaming skills of Shotgun Santa. Quick reflex zomboid elf recognition may stand you in good stead in the coming year. Or this could be the perfect moment to take up the Skinny Scub-enco underwater Dance fad and inject your renewed signature quirky sense of fun into the workplace.

Pisces 18 February - 19 March All this week Venus has been in opposition to Mars. But at last the Pleides have ganged up and taken out the lot. So, while you may think that you have lots to do today, in practice it will be impossible to get on with anything sensible. You might as well ponder whether to become a Belieber or a Zayniac.

Aries 20 March - 18 April Let's face it Match.com has failed you abysmally – and it's probably for good reason. The time has come to lower your standards. Open your doors to AirBNB customers who are less picky about the frills. At this point you ought to just settle for company.

Taurus 19 April - 19 May This is the hundredth anniversary of the publication of the General Theory of Relativity conceived by another great Taurus. Most of your theories about everything are relatively general and incomprehensible. However they could profit from a little polish. So now it's your turn to shine! Grow your hair, dye it grey and affect a soleful, entangled look.

Gemini 20 May - 20 June, Today a cluster of energy at the top of your solar horoscope will be spurring you to seize the moment. But any decisiveness may prove disastrous. Over-thinking will not help you find solutions to your many 'unknown unknowns'. The Saturn Neptune alignment should see you cycling feverishly between equally piffling Christmas distractions.

Cancer 21 June - 21 July Time to remain cool and calm, but best to avoid being collected. Things are never really what they seem. You should make a request under the Freedom of Information act for all facebook files relating to your latest e-quest. A reality cheque is long overdue in your case.

Leo 22 July - 22 August If you fly with the rooks you should expect to be shot down. It's all very laudable to espouse the Volkswagen mindset of 'rule breaking', but CSIS is watching every move. So try to make life interesting for them by embracing the unexpected.

Virgo 23 August - 21 September, Play it safe. It is time to capitalise on your own suspicious nature. A discreet personal drone initiative will confirm all of your worst inklings about those new neighbours. Follow the eco-friendly advice of lifestyle guru Tony Blair ... there is 'no point in beating back the crocodiles, you've got to bomb the swamp'.

Libra 22 September - 22 October There are times when less input from your quarter is called for. This is one of them. It may be worth cutting back on your family routines. It is always tricky getting the balance just right. There are times when relaxing your grip and losing the plot can pay rich dividends and achieve much more than feeding your inner control freak.

Scorpio 23 October - 21 November. The Paleo Diet is likely to prove one of the most effective paths to achieving a new you, though many of the ingredients will prove hard to source. Unless you take up big game hunting you may find that the path to weight loss is very direct. Now is the time to join a re-wilding initiative and perhaps sponsor a local lynx.

Sagittarius 22 Nov. - 20 December In these days of austerity, the world prefers Scrooge to Santa. This is not for you however. A strong Neptune influence may induce you to volunteer for all sorts of duties in the coming year. Be selective however or you may find yourself leading the charge solo.

Oh Lackaday Me!

In a recent Ipsos/MORI poll to determine who are the happiest in the workplace, unexpectedly Titans of Industry and Bankers found themselves scraping the bottom of the rankings, even below embalmers, PIN number visualisers and disabled Bulgarian Babushka Santa impersonators. Social scientists have devised a rigorous system of determining a happiness quotient calibrated in HAP Units to achieve an incontrovertible comparison between people engaged in radically different employments. . Water-boarders and the criminally insane came out on the top of the table as the most contented with their lifestyle choices. It is often positive vibrations around the workplace itself that determines the happiness factor of its denizens. Bankers however found themselves at the bottom of the list with barely a HAP to share amongst them. 87% described themselves 'quite Hapless' or 'truly miserable' complaining of the unrelieved festive tunes piped into their premises during the holiday season. "It's a nightmare seeing all this inappropriate Quantitative Easing, all those people spending our money on seasonal junk and looking so god-damn self-righteous about it. It just gives us all the creeps," railed the manager of the Odessa Mains Street branch of the FUNBOO (First Universal Nigerian Bank of Odessa) To find out how you score on the HapIndex just take our in depth questionnaire by logging onto duxpress.com/odessaoracle

Dumpster.com - Building on Failure

These days there are so many web-sites for entering into relationships and creating unlikely liaisons out of the most incidental information. They may work for a one night or extend for a euphoric week but too often after that life changing tattoo the dreary reality of a rash moment sets in.

The folks at Dumpster have set up a web site where by answering some simple questions you can measure your relationship for what it's worth and then just blow it all away.

Learning from the pitfalls of the Ashley Madison model, they recognise that there are many people in the market who want to terminate ill conceived relationships but don't have the chutzpa to make the first move. The growing popularity of Dumpster.com reflects the realisation that those flurries of compromising information unleashed on the internet, all those ill-advised selfies undertaken in compromising moments of passion and intended only for the eyes of the loved one exist out there on the public record. Suddenly they become high risk items when the flames of passion cool and your partner wants out. The Dumpster concept is fiendishly simple. It will send out a withering final termination notice at the same time accessing your partner's data banks, wiping them spanking clean.

Only months ago Dumpster.com was a fledgling start-up, the dream of two visionary trolls tucked away in a dusty corner of Starbanks. Today it has grown into a multi-billion pound company listed on the NASDAQ exchange. It's a winning formula. Basically you are paying someone else to do your dirty work. Results are guaranteed devastating or your money back.

In this holiday season Dumpster is offering their Introductory Breakup Gift Pack – basically a Memory Oven, a conflagration of all files in which mention is made of the rejectee. Your Memory Oven will scour the social media and neutralise all references to your joint partnership among joint acquaintances or 3rd parties. What better time to light the bonfire on all that water under the bridge than at the beginning of a new year?

And they offer a range of options from the simple Outright Dump 001, an email rejection for those too timid to face the consequences of their actions, to a terse legal letter in one of 214 core languages notifying your partner of your cessation of ardour. "At the other end of the spectrum we can offer our more aggravated 'rub salt in the wound' type service which will unleash a slew of invective and alert all third parties to the deficiencies of the rejectee. Dumpster has recognised that these days many people need an agent who will take care of life's difficult problems. This is how most leaders work, delegating unpalatable messages and burying the bloodied hatchet while public gaze is focussed on some diverting non-issue." Timing is everything. As they point out you don't find David, Justin or Vladimir as bearers of bad news.

The Terminator Diet

Unites Paris Conference in War on Climate Change

Following his impassioned plea for the world to address climate change by cutting back on meat consumption Arnold Schwarzenegger has released his new lifestyle guide the Terminator Cookbook

“Actual cooking is for wimps. I spend like zilch time laboring over a hot stove. But I like to think of my new diet as a survival nutrition guide for both the human race and me too”. He held a succession of audiences of Climate pundits spellbound with his vision of a radical eating.

“You humans were designed for a simple diet. I like to grow my own legumes and I have sourced a good genetic strain of ditzispuringia halitosis from Tibet. It grows like wildfire and I keep flats of the stuff in my bedroom under grow lights so that I can sing to them when I get up in the morning and accelerate growth. Growth is a nurturing phenomenon. Then you just drop them into the Liquidex, and add a little A-S-Supertonic elixifier, (my own signature brand available at all responsible health food stores just look for the ASS label) and hey presto! you have a well-balanced, satisfying foundation for the days nutrition”

Mr Schwarzenegger has a long history of public philanthropy, improving others lives not only as governor of California, which he envisions as a vegetarian state by 2020, but much earlier as Chairman for Fitness and Sports under the Reagan administration when he spearheaded the crackdown on steroid use among athletes.

“I’ve always stuck to the basics, like simple fresh food and plenty of A-S-Supertonic. The Terminator Diet eliminates animal flatulence which is a major cause of methane pollution in our atmosphere. It can also eliminate costly food miles entirely cutting out the waist!”

The Scary House Bandwagon

Local Odessa citizens are jumping on the bandwagon to provide scary environments that cater to a big upswing in Terror Tourism.

Around the world Air BNB hosts are throwing their doors open to embrace the unknown. With a surge in demand for a more authentic tourist experience piloted through such Tour-ist fallbacks as SCAir BNB, entrepreneurs are laying on home grown witches covens, and terrorist cells engaged in bomb making as well as the old standbys like Zombiefest. After the immense success racked up in foreign capitals like London for riotous events like ‘Scumoween’ a crowd participation event in which large areas of the city were trashed, local initiatives have sought to up the ante to attract an ever more sophisticated foreign clientele. The terror employment sector in the Odessa area has mushroomed in recent years. The internet allows local aficionados to keep abreast of all the latest technology.

BIG BOOM Expected in Mini Modular Reactors

So you thought that MMR was a vaccine to be avoided, likely to cause instant autism or bring out ever more mutations in your children? How last Millennium! Smart money today is on a new form of MMR, Mini Modular Reactors.

During the last decade world reliance on nuclear power has dropped from 18% in 2005 to 11% now. But we can look forward to a trend reversal and a BIG BOOM as mini installations come on line everywhere.

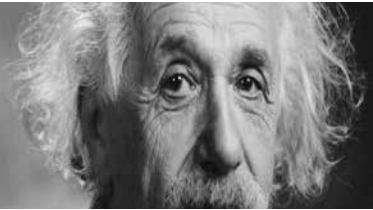

Around the world responsible homemakers are pouring money into this panacea for global warming. Nuclear reactors create a tiny fraction of the carbon was that afflicts the burning of fossil fuels. Localising power generation within your community will reduce the massive wastage in long distance transmission of energy.

Dr Felgoot of CINA, the Canada

Institute for Nucular Advancement explains the great savings accruing if nuclear goes local.

“These are just teeny, little, user friendly installations, achieved at the fraction of the cost a full-blown reactor. They can be delivered anywhere in the world by drone. Whether your shivering in a chilly cave in Afghanistan or hankering for air conditioning in the Mali desert, these user friendly units can be air-lifted and activated with minimal fuss – and its all entirely off-grid. When the fuel is expended the whole unit can be picked up for recycling and replaced with an up-to-date model. Our patented advanced tracking mechanisms will ensure that the key components do not fall into enemy hands. I can assure you that all such safety concerns have been fully addressed by skilled risk assessors..

Celebrating a Century of Relativity

This Year the world celebrates the centennial of a theory that has come to revolutionise our thinking about the universe.

In 1915 Albert Einstein, a Swiss patents clerk, dabbling in nuclear physics, published his famous statement on relativity which has been summarised as “Two things are relatively infinite: the universe and human stupidity; and I’m not sure about the universe.” Einstein’s theories about entanglement, which seemed anti-intuitive at the time, has proven to be the dominant political insight of the 20th century with the realisation that everything has become relatively incomprehensible.

Local artist Myrtle Pin has lovingly created this compelling image of Einstein entitled “A Bigger Noodle” assembling 245 packages of Lancelli Spagetti Noodles into a Big Bang formation.

The Grim REAPA

Now that Theresa May’s REAPA Act (Regulation of Extra-Investigatory Access Powers Act) has passed through the mother of all parliaments, the children of all the other parliaments are preparing to pass their own versions. Britain finds itself at the forefront of nations vying to become WIGs or World Information Guardians.

Security agencies from around the world are beating a path to the CMHQ with lucrative contracts to excavate the cloud and gain high level access to the low-down on their own citizens.

Britain has had a long history of mining everybody else’s business. But many other parts of the world are new to the concept and often must pay lip-service to restrictive personal privacy legislation. However they have no qualms about buying such information abroad.

Foreign information gathering services are heaping praise upon the new initiative. ‘It’s all about outsourcing the problem, sort of like a superior Guantanamo Info-Gulag’ trills Chuck Nebb, the new director of the NSA in Fort Meade. ‘Outsourcing, we can get what we need to keep Americans safe and secure. It’s a slam dunk for us, metaphysically speaking.”

Our OO Times London correspondent visited the Foreign Secretary in her pristine shelter deep under Westminster. Theresa May adopts her most conspiratorial gravelly whisper. ‘Because we’re an island, we know all about offshore operations.”

“We did it with banking, and taxpayer lite, transforming London into the keeper of the world’s purse strings. But that is nothing compared to assuming control of the info cloud and asserting our position as the world’s primate info-hub.’ ‘It’s all about building trust. Britain has had centuries of telling others how they should live. It just comes naturally to us, and people like to be spied on and told what to do.’

May the Force be with you !

‘One of the advantages of the cloud is that the information is all there. It just needs to be harvested responsibly and sorted into intelligible data that will stand up in whatever legal system you might choose to apply.

It’s all done by machines anyway, so that there is no margin for human error or bipartisan, left-wing pettiness.”

“And it’s totally innocuous, like the modern equivalent of an itemised phone bill , just a bit more detailed so that we can pinpoint issues like build-ups of Weapons of Mass Destruction and help to organise precision bombing raids in places as far afield as Fiji or New Zealand. While we are at it we can also ferret out paedophiles and religious fanatics and hand them over to the press for instant justice. As icing on the cake we can also nab those people who aren’t paying their TV Licences. It’s like a total Win-Win.

I’ve always maintained that an enlightened British vision can supersede any need for waterboarding or water cannons. All that water focussed security is just wishy-washy in the Third Millennium.

We envision that once ISIS gets up and running in the Cloud we will be able to tender valuable information to those who want to address their misgivings. Managing the world Info-Hub will undubitably put the Great back into Britain once more. Again we will truly punch above our weight.

Skeptics pointed out that though Ms May may talk, no one is likely to show interest in placing her on any surveillance list. It seems that we just don’t want to know.

Besides the media are much more interested in penetrating the love nests of the celebrati. REAPA sourced information would only inhibit the wider sweep of journalism.

LIMPOPO DIRECT’S fleets of self driving delivery drones have proven a great success in bringing your on-line purchases direct to your doorstep. Recently however the company has endured a hacking headache as many of its robotic operatives have been Bot-napped and diverted from their tasks. Bot-Nap drones have been reprogrammed to abscond with merchandise or even swarm and pilfer the homes of clients.

The chief Executive Officer of LIMPOPO DIRECT, Rob Otter however asserts that the days of robotic brigandry are now numbered. “We have developed a Robo-Buddy system so that posses of heavily armed operatives laden with materielle travel in convoys to ensure the completion of deliveries on time and on target.

We have developed a line of dummy decoys which respond to hacker control but then take assertive action when they have reached the hacker’s homeground. They can deploy a super magnetic force field to permanently neutralise the hackers environment.

May Day! May Day!

With austerity cutbacks in police enforcement around the world our dwindling men and woman in blue have to learn to think smart. Policing has been privatised in many 'high net worth enclaves' leaving local police forces to struggle on dwindling budgets. Fortunately enhanced surveillance capabilities have arrived just in time to counter the replacement of the bobby on the beat. Capital investment in new DEMOS technology now makes it feasible to analyse the daily contacts schedule and GPS data of every citizen and subject it to comprehensive risk analysis. Such technology can flag up the cultivation of the vulnerable young by paedophiles and terrorists of every hue. Though some question the practicality of keeping comprehensive records on every human transaction, the Home Secretary reassures all that the technology is already available. "It really just the modern equivalent of keeping an itemised phone bill". Theresa May is outspoken in her defence of the most up to date security policing procedures. "We live in truly terrifying times. If the general public were party to a tiny fraction of the malfeasance that crosses my desk every day there would not be one scintilla of reluctance to see this new technology rolled out across the empire." Local Police Chief Constable Raglan Owens affirms that even back streets Ab-ergavenny hosts some of the most dangerous of criminals, people whose agendas would be quite unfathomable to decent, hardworking taxpayers. "Thankfully we were able to swoop in on a group of sixth form students who were planning to behead the PM during Prime Ministers question time. Public beheadings, even of Corbynites and union leaders can not be tolerated in a freedom loving democracy."

Civil Service Hacker Uncovered

In recent year it has almost become commonplace but now another fast tracking Whitehall civil servant supposedly gainfully employed in knitting bobble hats and Instagraming the public has been flagged as likely responsible for the hacking and downloading of 250 million tax accounts and downloading the personal details of an entire nation onto Wikileaks. Within minutes approximately $ 15 trillion of private savings had been converted into untraceable Bitcoins. The PM has appointed a special internal review committee to look into this and this is expected to report back within 65 months. In a dramatic message from the Oval Office President Trump has addressed the American public explaining the gravity of the situation and explaining that Britain has probably succumbed to its Massive Muslim problem. The President announced that he would not flinch from deploying the nuclear option as soon as electricity could be restored to the Presi-bunker. The President, whose sense of geography is irrelevant, is hedging his bets and intends to cover all bases. "It's funny how all those "C-grade" places with names starting in 'C', places like the Civil Service, Crimea, Colombia, Communist Cymru, Connecticut, China and Canada crop up as baddies on my radar all the time. These are places that have obviously been hijacked by the Massive Muslim problem. Many have gone way left of commie, with socialized medicine and ludicrous levels of taxation. It makes you think there's gotta be some kinda plot. But here's our opportunity to stand up and be noticed and take 'em outta the running up front before they get us."

As Simple as Buttered Toast

Did you know that NASA scien-tists have discovered that there 283% more taste buds in the under tongue and lower jaw that in the upper palate? So at last they have uncovered good reason why toast usually falls buttered side down.

For today's empty-nesters a treasured pet can become the obsessive focal point of their lives. But when the time comes to put your beloved pet down, tensions can flare up that too often result in extended legal battles. Tittan-Nya Mukerjeechidanabaram and her common lay partner Jay Q'u have allowed their dispute to escalate to titanic proportions. Their beloved pet Rottweiler, Pixie, expired last June and remains in cold storage awaiting burial. This is pending the outcome of a dispute in which her grieving owners argue over the nature of the committal service. Q'u insists that Pixie was a fully paid up part of the Anglican Animals Communion. "Pixie religiously attended the annual Blessing of the Animals festival at our local. Lord knows they need all the help they can get. She regarded herself a full member of the congregation. I would park her in a pew every Sunday morning while I went off to do my chores. Titan-Nya however has other views. "Pixie was a transcendent mystical being, a true Karm1c spirit and I soon came to realise that she was the rebirth of my beloved grandmother. Granny-ji who had no time for the Anglican Communion. It would be an outrage to consign her to such mumbo-jumbo." In these days of political correctitudinousness, Judge Trajan de Salvage presiding on the High Court bench has expressed his reluctance to show a predisposition towards any particular religion. He has proposed a settlement whereby Pixie is severed longitudinally allowing the parts to be allocated to the grieving owners by lottery. While Q'u has reluctantly agreed to the division, Tittan-Nya is still determined to take her case to the highest court in the land. "No one wants to see their Granny carved up in the kind of
